Course Description:

This course focuses on becoming a professional. To choose to enter a profession is to take on a distinct and important set of responsibilities. The course is designed to probe into and investigate legal, personal, and societal values, ethics, morals and ideologies that impact on being a professional. The student will learn how their personal ethics come into play in their success as a professional. The course will pose many ethical issues and dilemmas for the student to consider as they evolve into a professional.

Learning Outcomes:

As a result of active participation in these sessions, a student can expect to:

- Critically analyze what it means to be a good human service professional.
- Critically analyze professional ethics issues and resolve issues using ideas and techniques learned from this course.
- Apply, analyze, and evaluate the effectiveness of various theories of moral reasoning and behaviour in ethical situations.
- Develop a personal ethical model of professional-client relationship and evaluate it for suitability and appropriateness.
- Analyze and critique the moral issues surrounding lying and truth telling.
- Explore and determine a position on the ethical obligation of a professional in the protection of private information and the boundaries of confidentiality.
- Apply and critically analyze the principles of justice as they apply to an individual and to the professional's obligation to society.
- Explore the implications of conflict of interest in professional life.

Course Format:

This course uses a variety of teaching/learning methods including discussion, personal reflection, experiential exercises, student presentations, role-plays, group activities and especially case studies. Our faculty aims to create a learning environment where the learner is actively engaged in inquiry, critical thinking and problem solving. The classroom provides you with a place where you can learn with and from others in a cooperative and collaborative manner.

You are expected to take a very active part in class discussions and take responsibility for your own learning. Be a positive and co-operative team member. Columbia College uses a facilitation model of instruction where the facilitator's role is to facilitate your learning. The expectation is that you will come to class prepared with pre-class homework completed. Your facilitator will engage you in activities that are based on your completed homework and readings. Your enthusiastic and positive approach in the classroom will create an atmosphere that will help every student develop the knowledge, skills and attitudes that are needed for success.

How you conduct yourself in our classes will, to a large extent, mirror your conduct in society and your future work site. For example, if you have a tendency to ask questions, challenge the ideas of others in a respectful manner, draw out the best from your colleagues, and encourage both group development and task accomplishment in this class, it is likely you will do the same at work. A high level of student involvement and developing professionalism is expected in the classroom as you work towards your goal.

- Format: This assignment should be typed and double-spaced. Do not include title pages. Include your name at the top of each page. A minimum of one-inch margins on each side. 12-point Times New Roman font is preferred. Each assignment should have a minimum length of 700 words but is not to exceed 1000 words. Students will be evaluated according to the attached rubric: Case Study Analysis Rubric.

Case Study #1:

The patient Mr. Green is a 57-year-old gentleman with aggressive prostate cancer who is being taken care of by the nursing team in the oncology department of a general hospital in Calgary, Canada. Mr. Green was diagnosed with prostate cancer seven years ago but refused medical and surgical treatment at the time. He chose to seek alternative treatment and did not follow up with the urologist over that seven-year period. Mr. Green has now presented with anemia and hypoproteinemia. After several diagnostic tests over a period, it was discovered that the cancer had metastasized to his bones. It had spread locally to his lymph nodes and the primary tumor was invading the bladder and partially obstructing the left kidney.

Mr. Green had several admissions over a two-month period for various reasons. On the last admission Mr. Green was told that he may only have 4–6 weeks (previously it was 6–12 months) to live after a cystoscopy showed further extensive growth of the tumor. It was determined that any further surgical/medical intervention would not be appropriate in this case and that a palliative care regimen was the next step. At this point the patient reported to the health care team that he had resigned himself to the fact that he was going to die. Mr. Green pulled one of the author's colleagues aside and confided to the nurse that he planned to kill himself and that is was a secret that the nurse was not to tell anyone.

Case Study #2:

Barry was working at a day treatment center for intellectually delayed adults. One afternoon when everyone was playing basketball, another worker became frustrated with the low level of one of the clients and very forcefully threw the ball, hitting the client in the face and causing a very bad bruise.

Barry, disturbed by the incident, went to his supervisor to discuss his concern. The supervisor was supportive. Barry, however, did not see a change in his colleague's behavior and again approached his boss. This time the supervisor said that these people had accidents all the time and that it would be better if he just did his job and went about his business.

Barry had a number of questions in his mind. He was not sure what should be considered excessive force in this situation. What rights did the adults have? He felt this situation was wrong, but just wasn't sure what to do. He didn't take any further steps.
